SWEET SUCCEEDS DINWIDDIE.

Prohibitionists to Publish Paper During the Campaign.

Oklahoma City, Ok., Aug. 6.—At the meeting of the board of trustees of the Oklahoma Anti-Saloon League here today E. C. Dinwiddie, who managed the prohibition campaign last fall, tendered his resignation as superintendent and Rev. E. M. Sweet of Tulsa was named to succeed him, with headquarters in this city. Mr. Dinwiddie did not resign because of any difficulties with the league, but on account of the fact that he is going to Europe for his health. The league today appointed committees to raise a fund to carry on the campaign this fall and to assist in relieving the league of a debt of $6,000 from the last campaign. It was decided to publish a paper twice a month during the coming campaign in defense of the agency system in the referendum. Mr. Dinwiddie left tonight for New York and will sail for London Aug. 20.

MIXED BLOOD SUICIDES.

The Case is Surrounded With Mystery and the Husband is Under Arrest.

Shawnee, Aug. 6.—Birdie Spoon, age 34 years, daughter of Jim Moyer, a Shawnee Indian and wife of John Wolfe, a Creek and Mexican mixture, was found dead near her home, two miles west of this city and one-half mile south Wednesday morning at 7 o'clock by Green Grass, also an Indian. It was reported to Chief of Police Sims and Coroner Fleming; the body was brought to the morgue, where an autopsy was performed, and the husband is now under arrest.

The affair is surrounded in mystery. The authorities are inclined to believe the suicide story offered by the husband of the deceased. The result of the autopsy will not be made known until this morning, when it will be decided whether or not to hold an inquest; the jury has already been empanelled.

ALF HUNTER MAY BE CAUGHT

The Slayer of Sheriff Garrison is in Custody at Kingfisher, it is Believed.

Oklahoma City, Aug. 6.—Alf Hunter, slayer of Sheriff George W. Garrison, is believed to be in custody of Sheriff Tate at Kingfisher and is being held for positive identification.

He was captured at Wellington, Kan., and taken to Kingfisher late yesterday evening, handcuffed and shackled to the seat in the smoker. He was removed from the train and taken to the jail, where Henry Daugherty, brother of Susie Pride, who was slain by Hunter, is certain that the negro is Hunter.

BRYAN EXPLAINS LABOR PLANK

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 6.—William J. Bryan today issued a statement replying to a circular some weeks ago by the National Association of Manufacturers and signed by James W. Van Cleave. Mr. Bryan declares that the pamphlet of Mr. Van Cleave raises two questions. First, is there anything in the labor plank of the democratic platform to which business men can justly take exception? and, the second, is the labor question so important to business men as to justify them in ignoring all other issues?

Mr. Bryan declares that the provision in the Democratic platform for the creation of a labor department with a cabinet officer at its head can not possibly offend business men. He then says:

"The platform draws a distinction between associations of wage earners organized for the protection of wages and the improvement of labor conditions and industrial corporations which act in restraint of trade. The difference between a labor organization and a trust is so apparent that no disinterested person will deny that they should be treated separately. To class the two kinds of organizations together and deal with them under one law is bound to do injustice to one or the other. Surely the business men can have no vital concern in including the labor organizations in the anti-trust laws."

Mr. Bryan then takes up the plank providing for trial by jury in cases of indirect contempt. He insists that this can not raise a question of vital concern to business men, because every man has a right to a jury trial. He then says:

Jury Trials in Contempt Cases.
"An attempt has been made to raise a false issue in regard to the course and to make it appear that the demand for trial by jury is an assault upon the integrity of the courts. Those who make this argument might as well insist on the abolition of the jury in all cases, for the jury system itself is just as much reflection upon the bench as is this demand for trial by jury in these particular cases."

"But there is another labor plank that Mr. Van Cleave probably has in mind. This is the plank that declares that parties to all judicial proceedings should be treated with rigid impartiality and that an injunction should not issue in any case in which an industrial dispute would not lie no industrial dispute were involved. Do the business men insist upon impartiality in judicial proceedings? Do they insist that the mere fact that there is an industrial dispute should justify an injunction? That plank does not attempt to interfere with the issue of an injunction where other conditions justify it, but it does oppose the issue of an injunction merely for the purpose of bringing the court into the discussion of an industrial dispute."

"Mr. Van Cleave asserts that this plank arouses a class spirit and constitutes demand for class favor. But in tomorrow's News this is not true. It is a declaration that the writ of injunction should not be used for the purpose of creating a class or favoring a class. The laboring men resent an attempt to discriminate against them in favor of any other class."

Mr. Bryan, in conclusion, declares that Mr. Van Cleave does the business men an injustice in assuming that his waking hours are filled with fears of the wage earner and that his night's rest is broken by imaginary disputes with those who toil.

MURDERED FOR HIS MONEY

Nowata, Ok., Aug. 6.—Lured into a cornfield and assassinated for the sum of $1200 for which he had sold his land George Bird, a Creek freedman, lies mortally wounded and in agony while the officers search for Alfred Key, a negro who shot Bird and escaped with the money for which he committed the crime.

Bird who is 23 years old owned a farm near Nowata. When the restrictions were removed he was offered $1200 for the land. He refused to accept a check but gave a deed to the property for $1200 in cash and with the roll of bills in his pocket started out to paint the town. Key, a negro companion whom he picked up and to whom he freely gave money, Bird had spent fifteen dollars when Key made up his mind to have the roll of greenbacks.

On one pretense or another he deceived Bird to a cornfield near town and when Bird's back was turned the man who had been his friend and boon companion drew a six-shooter and brutally fired upon him. The wounded man fell dying in a corn row and his murderer knelt beside him in the darkness, loosing his death grip from the roll of bills, secured the money and fled.

For hours Bird lay wounded until his groans attracted the attention of passersby and he was brought to Nowata and given medical attention. He cannot live and while he lies in the clutches of death officers are on the trail of his murderer.

CLAYTON BRUNER ARRESTED.

The Bad Seminole Negro Who Was Principal in Cutting Offray Arrested at Konawa by Sheriff Dodson.

Thursday afternoon Sheriff Tom Dodson of Seminole county arrested Clayton Bruner who was chief carver at the picnic scrap of last Wednesday. Bruner escaped and the officers were on the continual watchout for him until his capture was effected in the Seminole. Bruner made no resistance, claimed that he had gone to town to give up.

The examining trial of Bruner and Sandy Barnett and the latter's wife charged with assault and attempt to kill is in progress this afternoon, and the tales told of the affray by negro witnesses is carried in some instances at variance. A result of the trial will be given tomorrow's News.

PROMINENT LEGISLATOR DEAD.

A Frank Ross of Durant, Just Nominated Dies From Operation.

Durant, Ok., Aug. 6.—Hon. A. Frank Ross, who was renominated for State Representative from this county by democrats Tuesday, died at his home in this city at 5:20 o'clock this evening, after undergoing an operation for peritonitis, which was adopted as a last alternative. Mr. Ross was a member of the last legislature and most highly respected men of Southeastern Oklahoma. He was of Choctaw extraction, and in the earlier days a Baptist missionary among the Indians and while an extensive property owner and large farmer and fruit grower, he had never fully abandoned church work and often occupied the pulpit of various churches.

He as a past worthy grand master of the Odd Fellows of Indian Territory and was recently given a handsome gold medal by the grand lodge of that organization. He was stricken Monday and was unable to reach the polls Tuesday, but it was only today that news of his critical condition spread and his death this evening was a great shock to this community.

Served as coffee, the new coffee substitute known to grocer's everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee, will trick even a coffee expert. Not a grain of real coffee in it either. Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and gangs of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. Light Vote.
Only one-fourth of the total vote was polled in the primaries here Tuesday. The total vote was 105, divided as follows, Democrats, 82; republican, 14; socialist, 9. Those in charge of the primary failed to copy off the vote on floater, corporation commissioner and other places where there were contests. For this reason the Chief-Leader is unable to give the vote. However, we learn that Ratliff and Watson were leaders.—Chief-Leader, Konawa.

Ada Gets Second, Too.

The second game with Purcell was well attended, but the playing was marked with sluggishness and indifference throughout. Mike, who was in the box for Ada, was not in good form and Middlebrook for Purcell seemed to be unsafe, too. McDole was displaced by McCluckey and Middlebrook by Mathis. These did only fairly well. Purcell had good lead until seventh inning when by a mishap or two on the part of the visitors and some slugging by Ada, the locals ran in four, making the score 8 to 6 in favor of Ada. Features were, three base hits by J. Ellis, McCluckey and McDivitt and running catch by Conklin in right. The game had not progressed far when Purcell, sore at Umpire Coffman and demanded that he be taken out. Lancaster took his place. The last of the series was played this afternoon.

THE FIRST MEMORIAL ERECTED TO CHARLES DICKENS IN LONDON

VIRGINIA CLEMM POE

AMERICANS who deplore the fact that the memory of Poe has not been duly honored in a conventional way may extract a grain or two of comfort from the thought that it was not until last summer (1907) that the first memorial to Dickens was erected in London. Despite the great love of Englishmen, and especially of Londoners, for Dickens, it was nearly 40 years after his death—he died, it will be remembered, in 1870—before a memorial of any kind was erected to his memory in the British capital. This memorial is a simple portrait bust, with a bronze tablet, and was placed upon the site of Furnival's inn, Holburn. It was at Furnival's inn that Dickens wrote "Pickwick," and it was there, in a little room on the third floor, that he awoke one morning, in 1836, to find himself famous.

Poe's failure of election to the Hall of Fame is another very real grievance to many of his countrymen, but a parallel, in a way, to this situation, too, may be found overseas. Last November the authorities of the British museum undertook to select 19 names as the greatest and most representative in English literature to be painted on 19 panels in the reading room of the British museum. It was no easy task, but the names finally settled upon by the trustees of the museum were: Chaucer, Caution, Tindale, Spenser, Shakespeare, Bacon, Milton, Locke, Addison, Swift, Pope, Gibbon, Wordsworth, Scott, Byron, Carlyle, Macaulay, Tennyson and Browning.

This selection, of course, by no means met with universal commendation. On the contrary, loud cries of complaint and inquiry were heard from all over the country as soon as it was announced. Where was Dickens? Where was Thackeray? Where was Robert Burns? Where were Dryden, Johnson and Burke?—and, to continue: Where were Fielding, Shelley, Blake, Richardson, Butler and Ruskin? And where, asked George Bernard Shaw, in a stern and wrathful tone, was Bunyan?

Thus we see that other national households besides our own have trouble in arranging their literary treasures to suit all the members of the family.

No one, perhaps, could speak with more authority on the subject of Poe than the late Mr. Edmund Clarence Stedman, himself a poet, the writer of a delightful life of Poe, and one of the hundred electors to the Hall of Fame. In the August number of the North American Review he said:

"If the vote for Cooper gave cause for wonder, what of the insufficient tally score for Poe, whose manes probably will never cease to be vexed by a witting class of followers, but concerning whose place in imaginative literature the world at large has not the slightest doubt? As a writer he was among the first to recognize the powers of Hawthorne; both were idealists, and if one produced no sustained romances like 'The Scarlet Letter,' the other gave voice to no lyric melodies such as 'Israfel' and 'The Haunted Palace.' These artistic, beauty-haunted compeers were twin orbs in their nineteenth century constellations. And as for the matter of renown—of a place in the Hall of Fame—what is fame? On your conscience, fellow judges, whether you are realists or dreamers, jurists, scholars or divines, pay some slight regard to that voice of the outer world, which one of our own writers termed the verdict of 'a sort of contemporaneous posterity,' note that there is scarcely an enlightened tongue into which Poe's lyrics and tales have not been rendered—that he is read and held as a distinctive genius, in France, Spain, Germany, Italy, Russia, Scandinavia—that the spell of his art is felt wherever our own English speech goes with the flags of its two great overlords. Fame! Is there one of us still unconscious of Poe's fame?"

"Not hear? When noise was everywhere! It tolled Increasing like a bell."

"Those who have given their votes for Franklin and Hamilton surely have not demurred on ethical grounds to one against whom no charge of immorality can lie, seeing that his life, like his handiwork, was chaste as moonlight. That he was poor and headstrong is true; and that he was the congenital victim of an abnormal craving for stimulants, now accounted a disease, is true; but what of all this beside the gift that made its shining way against such odds—beside one's gratitude for his crystallization of our inchoate taste and for the recognition which his poetry and romance did so much to gain for the literary product of his native land?"

When Maarten Maartens visited New York city last summer to attend the peace conference one of the first things he touched on in an interview (in the New York Times) on literary matters was the subject of Poe. He said:

"Can you tell me where Poe is buried? I scarcely expected the answer I have been inquiring for ever since I landed. He is buried somewhere, isn't he? and he is your greatest writer, isn't he? The greatest interest attaches, if one might judge from the controversy which rages to this day, to the cause and manner of his death, but apparently no one knows or cares where his body lies or can direct the foreign pilgrim whither to repair to render his meed of reverence."

Mr. Stedman's judgment is thus confirmed—indeed, more than confirmed, it is strongly emphasized by Mr. Maartens, who places Poe at the head of American men of letters. Let us now listen to a voice from England; that of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who said of Poe in a recent article in an English (Cassell's) magazine:

"I have said that I look upon Poe as the world's supreme short story writer. His nearest rival, I should say, was Maupassant. The great Norman never rose to the extreme force and originality of the American, but he had a natural power, an inborn instinct towards the right way of making his effects, which mark him as a great master. He produced stories because it was in him to do so as naturally and as perfectly as an apple tree produces apples. What a fine, sensitive, artistic touch it is! How easily and delicately the points are made!"

Poe was proud of being a Virginian. In 1841 he wrote to a friend in Baltimore: "I am a Virginian—at least I call myself one, for I have resided all my life, until within the last few years, at Richmond."

Another writer, Mr. Charles L. Moore, invites attention to Poe's merits as a "tone-painter," in an article in the Dial. Most epics and great works of fiction, he thinks, have no trace of tone—the region of tone being the drama, the lyric and the prose story. Hamlet begins with a tone picture, the scene on the platform at Elsinore, hardly equaled in Shakespeare. Continuing Mr. Moore says: "With of course, other immense inferiorities, Poe cannot come into comparison with Shakespeare in variety of tone. Shakespeare's different pieces are keyed to all the notes of color, from ebony black to the purest gold of sunlight. Poe keeps in the main in the dark side of the spectrum. But within his range there are great differences in shade and always absolute certainty of effect. Consider the varieties of tone in the grave, somber colors of 'The Fall of the House of Usher,' the restless brilliancy of 'The Masque of the Red Death,' and the sober, ordered daylight of 'Londor's Cottage;' or the range between the intangible shadows of 'Ulalume,' the rich gloom of 'The Raven,' and the faceted sparkle of 'The Haunted Palace.' As the modern world of letters has mainly gone to Keats to learn style—the perfection of word phrasing—so it has gone to Poe to learn tone, the truths of keeping an atmosphere in composition. 'Poe did not set himself to write copy-book maxims of morality, but the total effect of his work is that of loftiness and nobility. His men are brave and his women are pure. He is the least vulgar of mortals. Perhaps, if books have any effect at all, his tend to make men too truthful, too sensitive, too high-minded."

Standards, evidently, have changed since Emerson referred to Poe as "that jingle man." Alluding to this disparaging comment Dr. H. G. Wells, the English novelist and writer on sociology, said at a dinner in Boston: "I think hardly of your New England writers for their contempt of Poe. I shall never be able to forget that Emerson called him 'that jingle man.' To-day a thousand read Poe where one reads Emerson, and not to know Poe's work is rather a disgrace."

Rupert Taylor, LL. B., in a recently printed 'Study of Edgar Allan Poe,' has this to say of Poe's private life: "Poe took pleasure in the softer influences of home life, although there is little or no reflection of it in his writings. He dearly loved his wife and her mother, of whom he speaks in an excellent sonnet addressed to her after the death of his wife, as 'more than mother.' In the 'Black Cat' he gives evidence of a fondness for domestic pets. His cottage at Fordham was beautified by vines and flowering plants, and he kept in cages several singing birds and tropical birds of plumage. He was as all who knew anything about the matter attested on every occasion a devoted and model husband."

People in general are so accustomed to regard Poe as a poet and short story writer that they fail to realize that he was also a profound speculative thinker. In an article entitled "Poe as an Evolutionist" (Popular Science Monthly, September) Mr.

Frederic Drew Bond points out that in estimating his character too little attention is bestowed on this phase of his work. He finds that Poe entertained in its broad outlines that idea of the changes and development of the world which goes, nowadays, by the name of the theory of evolution. On February 3, 1848, Poe delivered, as a lecture at the Society library of New York, an abstract of his speculations on the material and spiritual universe—its essence, origin, creation, present condition and destiny. Shortly afterward this was published by Putnam under the title "Eureka." After quoting the paragraphs from Eureka in which Poe sums up his theory of cosmic development, Mr. Bond says:

"The statement of Poe that 'heterogeneousness, brought about directly through condensation, is proportional with it forever,' appears to contain the germ of Herbert Spencer's developed formula: 'Evolution is a change from an indefinite, incoherent homogeneity to a definite, coherent heterogeneity through continuous differentiations and integrations.' Noteworthy, also, is Poe's statement of the correlation between mental development and physical organization."

"It is improbable that 'Eureka' had any influence in preparing the way for the reception of evolutionary ideas, a little later; at the most such influence must have been of the slightest, for though his work was early translated into foreign languages, the failure to find fitting recognition of its true character, and the general obscurity in which it has lain, seems to preclude such a likelihood. Its interest lies in the light it throws on its author and in the honorable place it assigns him in that long line of thinkers from Thales to Darwin."

The status, then, of Edgar Allan Poe, 60 years after, is as follows:

Mr. Edmund Clarence Stedman finds that Poe "is read and held as a distinctive genius in France, Spain, Germany, Italy, Russia, Scandinavia—that the spell of his art is felt wherever our own English speech goes with the flags of its two great overlords."

Mr. Maarten Maartens declares that Poe is "at the head of American literature," and "that Europe is quite agreed, as it has been from the first, in recognizing the overshadowing genius of Edgar Allan Poe."

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle looks upon Poe "as the world's supreme short story writer," whose "nearest rival was Maupassant."

Charles Frederic Stansbury pronounces Poe "a brilliant genius to emulate the work of whom is the despair of great minds and the confusion of little ones."

Mr. Charles L. Moore tells us that "Poe was the least vulgar of mortals," and that "the total effect of his work is that of loftiness and nobility."

Miss Myrtle Reed says that Poe "fought bravely against cruel odds."

Mr. Rupert Taylor finds that Poe was "on every occasion a devoted and model husband."

Mr. Frederic Drew Bond points out that Poe "had a prevision of the doctrine of evolution," and that "he is entitled to an honorable place in that long line of thinkers from Thales to Darwin."

This, then, is the testimony, on direct examination, of the year 1907 in the case of Edgar Allan Poe versus those electors to the Hall of Fame who have, so far, withheld from him their votes.

SWEET SUCCEEDS DINWIDDIE.

Prohibitionists to Publish Paper During the Campaign.

Oklahoma City, Ok., Aug. 6.—At the meeting of the board of trustees of the Oklahoma Anti-Saloon League here today E. C. Dinwiddie, who managed the prohibition campaign last fall, tendered his resignation as superintendent and Rev. E. M. Sweet of Tulsa was named to succeed him, with headquarters in this city. Mr. Dinwiddie did not resign because of any difficulties with the league, but on account of the fact that he is going to Europe for his health. The league today appointed committees to raise a fund to carry on the campaign this fall and to assist in relieving the league of a debt of $6,000 from the last campaign. It was decided to publish a paper twice a month during the coming campaign in defense of the agency system in the referendum. Mr. Dinwiddie left tonight for New York and will sail for London Aug. 20.

MIXED BLOOD SUICIDES.

The Case is Surrounded With Mystery and the Husband is Under Arrest.

Shawnee, Aug. 6.—Birdie Spoon, age 34 years, daughter of Jim Meyer, a Shawnee Indian and wife of John Wolfe, a Creek and Mexican mixture, was found dead near her home, two miles west of this city and one-half mile south Wednesday morning at 7 o'clock by Green Grass, also an Indian. It was reported to Chief of Police Sims and Coroner Fleming; the body was brought to the morgue, where an autopsy was performed, and the husband is now under arrest. The affair is surrounded in mystery. The authorities are inclined to believe the suicide story offered by the husband of the deceased. The result of the autopsy will not be made known until this morning, when it will be decided whether or not to hold an inquest; the jury has already been empaneled.

ALF HUNTER MAY BE CAUGHT

The Slayer of Sheriff Garrison is in Custody at Kingfisher; it is Believed.

Oklahoma City, Aug. 6.—Alf Hunter, slayer of Sheriff George W. Garrison, is believed to be in custody of Sheriff Tate at Kingfisher and is being held for positive identification.

He was captured at Wellington, Kan., and taken to Kingfisher late yesterday evening, handcuffed and shackled to the seat in the smoker. He was removed from the train and taken to the jail, where Henry Daugherty, brother of Susie Pride, who was slain by Hunter, is certain that the negro is Hunter.

The negro tallies with the description sent out by the sheriff's office. He has a wound in his arm; heavy eyebrows, scar on left side of face and in height and color fit the negro closely.

Sheriff Tate stated over the long distance telephone at two o'clock this morning that he was certain that he had the right man and that he would hold him until there was absolutely no doubt as to his positive identity.

BRYAN EXPLAINS LABOR PLANK

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 6.—William J. Bryan today issued a statement replying to a circular some weeks ago by the National Association of Manufacturers and signed by James W. Van Cleave. Mr. Bryan declares that the pamphlet of Mr. Van Cleave raises two questions. First, is there anything in the labor plank of the democratic platform to which business men can justly take exception? and, the second, is the labor question so important to business men as to justify them in ignoring all other issues?

Mr. Bryan declares that the provision in the Democratic platform for the creation of a labor department with a cabinet officer at its head can not possibly offend business men. He then says:

"The platform draws a distinction between associations of wage earners organized for the protection of wages and the improvement of labor conditions and industrial corporations which act in restraint of trade. The difference between a labor organization and a trust is so apparent that no disinterested person will deny that they should be treated separately. To class the two kinds of organizations together and deal with them under one law is bound to do injustice to one or the other. Surely the business men can have no vital concern in including the labor organizations in the anti-trust laws."

Mr. Bryan then takes up the plank providing for trial by jury in cases of indirect contempt. He insists that this can not raise a question of vital concern to business men, because every man has a right to a jury trial. He then says:

Jury Trials in Contempt Cases.
"An attempt has been made to raise a false issue in regard to the course and to make it appear that the demand for trial by jury is an assault upon the integrity of the courts. Those who make this argument might as well insist on the abolition of the jury in all cases, for the jury system itself is just as much reflection upon the bench as is this demand for trial by jury in these particular cases."

"But there is another objection, that Mr. Van Cleave probably has in mind. This is the plank that declares that parties to all judicial proceedings should be treated with rigid impartiality and that an injunction should not issue in any case in which an injunction would not lie in industrial dispute were involved. Do the business men insist upon impartiality in judicial proceedings? Do they insist that the mere fact that there is an industrial dispute should justify an injunction? That plank does not attempt to interfere with the issue of an injunction where other conditions justify it, but it does oppose the issue of an injunction merely for the purpose of bringing the court into the discussion of an industrial dispute."

"Mr. Van Cleave asserts that the plank arouses a class spirit and constitutes a threat to the property of this is not true. It is a declaration that the writ of injunction should not be used for the purpose of creating a class or favoring a class. The laboring men resent an attempt to discriminate against them in favor of any other class."

Mr. Bryan, in conclusion, declares that Mr. Van Cleave does the business men an injustice in assuming that his waking hours are filled with fears of the wage-earner and that his night's rest is broken by imaginary disputes with those who toll.

MURDERED FOR HIS MONEY

Nowata, Ok., Aug. 6.—Lured into a cornfield and assassinated for the sum of $1200 for which he had sold his land George Bird, a Creek freedman, lies mortally wounded and in agony while the officers search for Alfred Key, a negro who shot Bird and escaped with the money for which he committed the crime.

Bird who is 33 years old owned a farm near Nowata. When the restrictions were removed he was offered $1200 for the land. He refused to accept a check but gave a deed to the property for $1200 in cash and with the roll of bills in his pocket started out to paint the town. Key, a negro companion whom he picked up and to whom he freely gave money, Bird had spent fifteen dollars when Key made up his mind to have the roll of greenbacks.

On one pretense or another he decoyed Bird to a cornfield near town and when Bird's back was turned the man who had been his friend and boon companion drew a six-shooter and fatally fired upon him. The wounded man fell dying in a corn row and his murderer knelt beside him in the darkness, loosing his death grip from the roll of bills, secured the money and fled.

For hours Bird lay wounded until his screams attracted the attention of passersby and he was brought to Nowata and given medical attention. He cannot live and while he lies in the clutches of death officers are on the trail of his murderer.

CLAYTON BRUNER ARRESTED.

The Bad Seminole Negro Who Was Principal in Cutting Affray Arrested at Nowata by Sheriff Dodson.

Thursday afternoon Sheriff Tom Dodson of Seminole county arrested Clayton Bruner who was chief carver at the picnic scrap of last Wednesday. Bruner escaped and the officers were on the continual watchout for him until his capture was effected in the Seminole. Bruner made no resistance, claimed that he had gone to town to give up. The examining trial of Bruner and Sandy Barnett and the latter's wife charged with assault and attempt to kill is in progress this afternoon, and the tales told of the affray by negro witnesses is carrying on in some instances at variance. A result of the trial will be given tomorrow.

PROMINENT LEGISLATOR DEAD.

A Frank Ross of Durant, Just Nominated Dies From Operation
Durant Ok Aug 6.—Hon. A. Frank Ross, who was renominated for State Representative from this county by democrats Tuesday died at his home in this city at 5:20 o'clock this evening after undergoing an operation for peritonitis, which was adopted as a last alternative. Mr. Ross was a member of the last legislature and most highly respected men of Southeastern Oklahoma. He was of Choctaw extraction, and in the earlier days a Baptist missionary among the Indians and while an extensive property owner and large farmer and fruit grower he had never fully abandoned church work and often occupied the pulpit of various churches.

He was a past worthy grand master of the Odd Fellows of Indian Territory and was recently given a handsome gold medal by the grand lodge of that organization. He was stricken Monday and was unable to reach the polls Tuesday but it was only today that news of his critical condition spread and his death this evening was a great shock to this community.

Served as coffee the new coffee substitute known to grocers everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee will trick even a coffee expert. Not a grain of real coffee in it either. Pure healthful toasted grains malt nuts etc. have been so cleverly blended as to give a wonderful satisfying coffee taste and flavor. And it is made in a minute too. No tedious 20 to 30 minutes boiling. R. S. Tobin.

August time tells on the nerves. But that spiritless no ambition feeling can be easily and quickly altered by taking what is known by druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Within 48 hours after beginning to use the Restorative improvement will be noticed. Of course full health will not immediately return. The pain however will surely follow. And best of all you will realize and feel your strength and ambition as it is returning. Outside influences depress first the inside nerves then the stomach, heart, and kidneys will usually fail. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative and see how quickly health will be yours again. Sold by G. M. Ramsey.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism. Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease. In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Bamberg—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected dependable prescription. Without this last ingredient I successfully treated many cases of Rheumatism, but now at last I can finally cure all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. These same little granular wastes found in Rheumatic blood seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as under the action of water. And then when dissolved these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

Light Vote. Only one-fourth of the total vote was polled in the primaries here Tuesday. The total vote was 105, divided as follows, Democrats, 82; republican, 14; socialist, 9. Those in charge of the primary failed to copy off the vote on floater, corporation commissioner and other places where there were contests. For this reason the Chief-Leader is unable to give the vote. However, we learn that Radloff and Watson were leaders. Chief-Leader, Konawa.

Ada Gets Second, Too. The second game with Purcell was well attended, but the playing was marked with sluggishness and indifference throughout. Mike, who was in the box for Ada, was not in good form and Middlebrook for Purcell seemed to be unsafe, too. McDole was displaced by McCluckey and Middlebrook by Mathis. These did only fairly well. Purcell had good lead until seventh inning when by a mishap or two on the part of the visitors and some slugging by Ada, the locals ran in four, making the score 8 to 6 in favor of Ada. Features were, three base hits by J. Ellis, McCluckey and McDivitt and running catch by Conklin in right. The game had not progressed far when Purcell, sore at Umpire Coffman and demanded that he be taken out. Lancaster took his place. The last of the series was played this afternoon.

VIRGINIA CLEMM POE

POE'S COTTAGE AT FORDHAM, NEW YORK

Americans who deplore the fact that the memory of Poe has not been duly honored in a conventional way may extract a grain or two of comfort from the thought that it was not until last summer (1907) that the first memorial to Dickens was erected in London. Despite the great love of Englishmen, and especially of Londoners, for Dickens, it was nearly 40 years after his death—he died, it will be remembered, in 1870—before a memorial of any kind was erected to his memory in the British capital. This memorial is a simple portrait bust, with a bronze tablet, and was placed upon the site of Furnival's inn, Holborn. It was at Furnival's inn that Dickens wrote "Pickwick," and it was there, in a little room on the third floor, that he awoke one morning, in 1836, to find himself famous.

Poe's failure of election to the Hall of Fame is another very real grievance to many of his countrymen, but a parallel, in a way, to this situation, too, may be found overseas. Last November the authorities of the British museum undertook to select 19 names as the greatest and most representative in English literature to be painted on 19 panels in the reading room of the British museum. It was no easy task, but the names finally settled upon by the trustees of the museum were: Chaucer, Causton, Tisdale, Spenser, Shakespeare, Bacon, Milton, Locke, Addison, Swift, Pope, Gibbon, Wordsworth, Scott, Byron, Carlyle, Macaulay, Tennyson and Browning.

This selection, of course, by no means met with universal commendation. On the contrary, loud cries of complaint and inquiry were heard from all over the country as soon as it was announced. Where was Dickens? Where was Thackeray? Where was Robert Burns? Where were Dryden, Johnson and Burke?—and, to continue: Where were Fielding, Shelley, Blake, Richardson, Butler and Ruskin? And where, asked George Bernard Shaw, in a stern and wrathful tone, was Bunyan?

Thus we see that other national households besides our own have trouble in arranging their literary treasures to suit all the members of the family.

"If the vote for Cooper gave cause for wonder, what of the insufficient tally score for Poe, whose names probably will never cease to be vexed by a willful class of followers, but concerning whose place in imaginative literature the world at large has not the slightest doubt? As a writer he was among the first to recognize the powers of Hawthorne; both were idealists, and if one produced no sustained romances like "The Scarlet Letter," the other gave voice to no lyric melodies such as "Israfel" and "The Haunted Palace." These artistic, beauty-haunted compeers were twin orbs in their nineteenth century constellations. And as for the matter of renown—a place in the Hall of Fame—what is fame? On your conscience, fellow judges, whether you are realists or dreamers, jurists, scholars or divines, pay some slight regard to that voice of the outer world, which one of our own writers termed the verdict of "a sort of contemporaneous posterity," note that there is scarcely an enlightened tongue into which Poe's lyrics and tales have not been rendered—that he is read and held as a distinctive genius, in France, Spain, Germany, Italy, Russia, Scandinavia—that the spell of his art is felt wherever our own English speech goes with the flags of its two great overlords, Fame! Is there one of us still unconscious of Poe's fame?

"Not hear? When noise was everywhere! It tolled increasing like a bell."

"Those who have given their votes for Franklin and Hamilton surely have not demurred on ethical grounds to one against whom no charge of immorality can lie, seeing that his life, like his handiwork, was chaste as moonlight. That he was poor and headstrong is true; and that he was the congenital victim of an abnormal craving for stimulants, now accounted a disease, is true; but what of all this beside the gift that made his shining way against such odds—beside one's gratitude for his crystallization of our inchoate taste and for the recognition which his poetry and romance did so much to gain for the literary product of his native land."

When Maarten Maartens visited New York city last summer to attend the peace conference one of the first things he touched on in an interview (in the New York Times) on literary matters was the subject of Poe. He said:

"Can you tell me where Poe is buried? I scarcely expected the answer I have been inquiring for ever since I landed. He is buried somewhere, isn't he? and he is your greatest writer, isn't he? The greatest interest attaches, if one might judge from the controversy which rages to this day, to the cause and manner of his death, but apparently no one knows or cares where his body lies or can direct the foreign pilgrim whither to repair to render his meed of reverence."

Mr. Steadman's judgment is thus confirmed—indeed, more than confirmed, it is strongly emphasized by Mr. Maartens, who places Poe at the head of American men of letters. Let us now listen to a voice from England; that of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who said of Poe in a recent article in an English (Cassell's) magazine:

"I have said that I look upon Poe as the world's supreme short story writer. His nearest rival, I should say, was Maupassant. The great Norman never rose to the extreme force and originality of the American, but he had a natural power, an inborn instinct towards the right way of making his effects, which mark him as a great master. He produced stories because it was in him to do so as naturally and as perfectly as an apple tree produces apples. What a fine, sensitive, artistic touch it is! How easily and delicately the points are made!"

Poe was proud of being a Virginian. In 1841 he wrote to a friend in Baltimore: "I am a Virginian—at least I call myself one, for I have resided all my life, until within the last few years, at Richmond."

Another writer, Mr. Charles L. Moore, invites attention to Poe's merits as a "tone-painter," in an article in the Dial. Most epics and great works of fiction, he thinks, have no trace of tone—the region of tone being the drama, the lyric and the prose story. Hamlet begins with a tone picture, the scene on the platform at Elsinore, hardly equaled in Shakespeare. Continuing Mr. Moore says: "With, of course, other immense inferiorities, Poe cannot come into comparison with Shakespeare in variety of tone. Shakespeare's different places are keyed to all the notes of color, from ebony black to the purest gold of sunlight. Poe keeps in the main in the dark side of the spectrum. But within his range there are great differences in shade and always absolute certainty of effect. Consider the varieties of tone in the grave, somber colors of 'The Fall of the House of Usher,' the restless brilliancy of 'The Masque of the Red Death,' and the sober, ordered daylight of 'Londor's Cottage,' or the range between the intangible shadows of 'Ulalume,' the rich gloom of 'The Raven,' and the faceted sparkle of 'The Haunted Palace.' As the modern world of letters has mainly gone to Keats to learn style—the perfection of word-phrasing—so it has gone to Poe to learn tone, the truths of keeping an atmosphere in composition. 'Poe did not set himself to write copy-book maxims of morality, but the total effect of his work is that of loftiness and nobility. His men are brave and his women are pure. He is the least vulgar of mortals. Perhaps, if books have any effect at all, his tend to make men too truthful, too sensitive, too high-minded."

Standards, evidently, have changed since Emerson referred to Poe as "that jingle man." Alluding to this disparaging comment Dr. H. G. Wells, the English novelist and writer on sociology, said at a dinner in Boston: "I think hardly of your New England writers for their contempt of Poe. I shall never be able to forget that Emerson called him 'that jingle man.' To-day a thousand read Poe where one reads Emerson, and not to know Poe's work is rather a disgrace."

Rupert Taylor, LL. B., in a recently printed "Study of Edgar Allan Poe," has this to say of Poe's private life:

"Poe took pleasure in the softer influences of home life, although there is little or no reflection of it in his writings. He dearly loved his wife and her mother, of whom he speaks in an excellent sonnet addressed to her after the death of his wife, as 'more than mother.' In the 'Black Cat' he gives evidence of a fondness for domestic pets. His cottage at Fordham was beautified by vines and flowering plants, and he kept in cages several singing birds and tropical birds of plumage. He was as all who knew anything about the matter attested on every occasion a devoted and model husband."

People in general are so accustomed to regard Poe as a poet and short story writer that they fail to realize that he was also a profound speculative thinker. In an article entitled "Poe as an Evolutionist" (Popular Science Monthly, September) Mr.

Frederic Drew Bond points out that in estimating his character too little attention is bestowed on this phase of his work. He finds that Poe entertained in its broad outlines that idea of the changes and development of the world which goes, nowadays, by the name of the theory of evolution. On February 3, 1848, Poe delivered, as a lecture at the Society Library of New York, an abstract of his speculations on the material and spiritual universe—its essence, origin, creation, present condition and destiny. Shortly afterward this was published by Putnam under the title "Eureka." After quoting the paragraphs from Eureka in which Poe sums up his theory of cosmic development, Mr. Bond says:

"The statement of Poe that 'heterogeneousness, brought about directly through condensation, is proportional with it forever,' appears to contain the germ of Herbert Spencer's developed formula: 'Evolution is a change from an indefinite, incoherent homogeneity to a definite, coherent heterogeneity through continuous differentiations and integrations.' Noteworthy, also, is Poe's statement of the correlation between mental development and physical organization."

"It is improbable that 'Eureka' had any influence in preparing the way for the reception of evolutionary ideas, a little later; at the most such influence must have been of the slightest, for though his work was early translated into foreign languages, the failure to find fitting recognition of its true character, and the general obscurity in which it has lain, seems to preclude such a likelihood. Its interest lies in the light it throws on its author and in the honorable place it assigns him in that long line of thinkers from Thales to Darwin."

The status, then, of Edgar Allan Poe, 50 years after, is as follows:

Mr. Edmund Clarence Steadman finds that Poe "is read and held as a distinctive genius in France, Spain, Germany, Italy, Russia, Scandinavia—that the spell of his art is felt wherever our own English speech goes with the flags of its two great overlords."

Mr. Maarten Maartens declares that Poe is "at the head of American literature," and "that Europe is quite agreed, as it has been from the first, in recognizing the overshadowing genius of Edgar Allan Poe."

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle looks upon Poe "as the world's supreme short story writer," whose "nearest rival was Maupassant."

Charles Frederic Stansbury pronounces Poe "a brilliant genius to emulate the work of whom is the despair of great minds and the confusion of little ones."

Mr. Charles L. Moore tells us that "Poe was the least vulgar of mortals," and that "the total effect of his work is that of loftiness and nobility."

Miss Myrtle Reed says that Poe "fought bravely against cruel odds," Mr. Rupert Taylor finds that Poe was "on every occasion a devoted and model husband."

Mr. Frederic Drew Bond points out that Poe "had a prevision of the doctrine of evolution," and that "he is entitled to an honorable place in that long line of thinkers from Thales to Darwin."

This, then, is the testimony, on a direct examination, of the year 1907 in the case of Edgar Allan Poe versus those electors to the Hall of Fame who have, so far, withheld from him their votes.

The defeat of Senator Long by J. E. Bristow, in Kansas, was an instance wherein the republican masses defeated a man who favored corporate wealth in his votes in the United States senate. There cannot be much good expected of republican Kansas, but for once there is some credit due her.

Chairman Mack of the democratic national committee ought not to be surprised that the railroads refuse to give half-fare to the notification delegation that will go to Lincoln to notify Mr. Bryan of his nomination. That courtesy was extended the republican committee when it went to Cincinnati to notify Mr. Taft, but that was expected. Not only the railroads, but all other corporations of this country, will be found, during this campaign, extending favors and making contributions to the republicans.

PRESS COMMENT.

A Minnesota candidate for governor is said to eat pie with his knife. How he eats pie should be less important to the boys than how he passes it around.—Hobart Republican.

The reports on the cotton crop are very gratifying, whether from the government or state authorities, and the individual reports that are coming in are corroborative of what the official reports have told. At this time there is every reason to expect a good cotton crop.—Denison Herald.

The Denison Herald gives this piece of good advice to its clientele that will apply generally: The signs of the times all point to good business this fall and winter. Get in line and prepare to push your business just a little harder than you have done before. In this day and age the man who sits down and expects business to come to him will find that his more enterprising competitor has walked away with it. Get busy.—Paris Advocate.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism. Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pains of this deplorable disease.
In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, I can cure all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. These short-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer with out help. PROMINENT LEGISLATOR DEAD.

Frank Ross of Durant, Just Nominated Dies From Operation
Durant Ok Aug 6.—Hon. A. Frank Ross, who was nominated for State Representative from this county by democrats Tuesday died at his home in this city at 5:20 o'clock this evening after undergoing an operation for peritonitis, which was adopted as a last alternative. Mr. Ross was a member of the last legislature and most highly respected men of Southeastern Oklahoma. He was of Choctaw extraction, and in the earlier days a Baptist missionary among the Indians and while an extensive property owner and large farmer and fruit grower he had never fully abandoned church work and often occupied the pulpit of various churches

He as a past worthy grand master of the Odd Fellows of Indian Territory and was recently given a handsome gold medal by the grand lodge of that organization. He was stricken Monday and was unable to reach the polls Tuesday but it was only today that news of his critical condition spread and his death this evening was a great shock to this community

Served as coffee the new coffee substitute known to grocers everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee will trick even a coffee expert. Not a grain of real coffee in it either. Pure healthful toasted grains malted etc. have been so cleverly blended as to give a wonderful satisfying coffee taste and flavor. And it is made in a minute too. No tedious 20 to 30 minutes boiling. August time tells on the nerves. But that spiritless no ambition feeling can be easily and quickly altered by taking what is known by druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Within 48 hours after beginning to use the Restorative improvement will be noticed. Of course full health will not immediately return. The pain however will surely follow. And best of all you will realize and feel your strength and ambition as it is returning. Outside influences depress first the inside nerves then the stomach, heart, and kidneys will usually fail. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative and see how quickly health will be yours again. Sold by G. M. Ramsey

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism. Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and swellings of this deplorable disease.
In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected dependable prescription. Without this last ingredient I successfully treated many cases of Rheumatism, but now at least, I can finally cure all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. These man-like granular wastes found in Rheumatic blood seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when mixed with pure water. And then when dissolved these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual cause to suffer longer with this help. Light Vote.
Only one-fourth of the total vote was polled in the primaries here Tuesday. The total vote was 105, divided as follows, Democrats, 82; republican, 14; socialist, 9. Those in charge of the primary failed to copy off the vote on floater, corporation commissioner and other places where there were contests. For this reason the Chief-Leader is unable to give the vote. However, we learn that Ratliff and Watson were leaders.—Chief-Leader, Konawa.

Ada Gets Second, Too.
The second game with Purcell was well attended, but the playing was marked with sluggishness and indifference throughout. Mike, who was in the box for Ada, was not in good form and Middlebrook for Purcell seemed to be unsafe, too. McDole was displaced by McCluckey and Middlebrook by Mathis. These did only fairly well. Purcell had good lead until seventh inning when by a mishap or two on the part of the visitors and some slugging by Ada, the locals ran in four, making the score 8 to 6 in favor of Ada. Features were, three base hits by J. Ellis, McCluckey and McDivitt and running catch by Conklin in right. The game had not progressed far when Purcell, sore at Umpire Coffman and demanded that he be taken out. Lancaster took his place. The last of the series was played this afternoon.
